Attention, connection, and making space for one another

Make space for each speaker: phones away unless directed otherwise, face the speaker, avoid side conversations, and write one brief note for every presenter. Circle A = Attentive, S = Some lapses, or N = Not attentive. Be honest: an honest S or N is better than a false A. After the final presentation, complete the reflection pages.

When was I most attentive? What did I do that helped me listen?

Where did my attention slip, or where did I need a reminder? What happened?

What is one specific thing I will do next time to be a better listener and audience member?

Compare your 0.1 presentation with what you learned from watching and listening to classmates.

Submitted by (student number): _____

Date: _____

This is a reflection, not a re-mark. After seeing other approaches, reconsider what worked in your own 0.1 Past, Present & Becoming presentation and what you would do differently next time.

Re-score my 0.1 presentation after hearing the class

Knowledge	Thinking	Communication	Visuals & access.	Application	Total
_____ /2	_____ /2	_____ /2	_____ /2	_____ /2	_____ /10

Presentation reflection - compare, do not just score

After hearing others, what is one part of my own presentation that I still think was effective? Why?

Describe one specific thing another presenter did effectively. Why did it work for the audience?

Compared with what I saw and heard, what is one part of my presentation I would change? Why?

What is one specific thing I will do differently in my next presentation?

Activity feedback: What helped you listen, connect, or learn from other people?

Improve it next time: What should change to make this activity better?

Submit one PDF to Google Classroom. Digital: complete the editable Word file in Word, or upload it to Google Drive and open it with Google Docs, then download/export as PDF. Paper: scan these pages directly to PDF, or take clear photos, place them in a Google Doc or Word file in the correct order, then export as PDF. Open the PDF and check that all four pages are readable, upright, complete, and in order. Do not submit separate images.
